We have legal and moral obligations to contact authorities when we are worried about a child's safety, which we follow rigorously.

We are committed to the cultural safety of Aboriginal children, the cultural safety of children from culturally and/or linguistically diverse backgrounds, and to providing a safe and inclusive environment for children with a disability.

Signed copies of the Code of Conduct will be kept by Playground Ideas in a personnel file and a copy will be provided to the personnel or associate.

Child Safe Recruitment & Selection:

Our organisation has robust human resources and recruitment practices for all personnel. We use child safe recruitment, selection and screening practices that aim to recruit the safest and most suitable people to work in our programs.

- Our child safe practices include:
- Assessing all positions for the level for risk in relation to contact with children;
- Conducting at least two verbal referee checks that involve discussing child protection with referees;
- Undertaking criminal history checks<sup>1</sup> for each country the individual has lived for 12 months or longer over the past 5 years, and for the individual's country of citizenship. Playground Ideas will review these checks when personnel have a change in circumstances;
- Requiring statutory declarations where criminal history checks are not available;
- Requiring applicants to disclose whether they have been charged with child abuse/exploitation offences;
- Requiring applicants to read and sign onto the Playground Ideas Child Protection Code of Conduct;

Including questions on child protection during interviews for positions working with children;

Playground Ideas will not permit any person to work or have contact with children if they pose an unacceptable risk to children's safety or wellbeing.

Risk Assessment

Playground Ideas acknowledges that there are a number of potential risks to children in the delivery of our programs. Accordingly, we proactively assess and manage risks to children in order to reduce the risk of harm. This is achieved by examining each activity and program and its potential impact on children. Activities and programs that involve direct work with children are considered a higher risk, and therefore require more stringent child protection procedures.

Playground Ideas conducts a child protection risk assessment on every activity and project involving and affecting children prior to commencement. Mitigation strategies are put in place for any risk identified and these (and any emerging risks) are actively monitored throughout the activity/program cycle.

At times, our programs may include the participation of vulnerable groups of children and youth, including but not limited to, children and youth from disaster affected communities and children and youth living in refugee camps. We commit to designing, implementing and monitoring programs that are informed by a thorough risk assessment of the heightened risks posed to children and youth in these contexts.

Personnel and associates (as relevant) are trained in child protection and risk assessment. They are expected to be continually aware of potential risks to children and youth as well as to be actively minimising opportunities and situations where children and youth can be harmed.

Working with Partners

Playground Ideas determines whether partners are a child safe organisation by including child protection in our partner appraisal process. We commit to strengthening our partner's ability to protect children and youth in our programs by investing in targeted capacity building, training and awareness raising on child protection.

If a partner does not have their own Child Protection Policy, Code of Conduct or procedures in place that meet the standards set out in the Playground Ideas Child Protection Policy they will be required to sign and abide by the Playground Ideas Child Protection Policy, Code of Conduct and any relevant procedures.

Playground Ideas works with partners to undertake a child protection risk assessment for all programs and activities involving or affecting children and this is monitored throughout the life of the project cycle.

Playground Ideas includes clauses on child protection standards and agreed child protection measures in all partnership agreements and contracts.

Playground Ideas actively monitors the implementation of agreed child protection measures and external compliance obligations with our partners on an ongoing basis via project reports, project visits or annual audits.

Training

Our organisation is committed to regularly training and educating our personnel and associates (as relevant) on child abuse risks. All Playground Ideas personnel will be inducted to this Policy and the Child Protection Code of Conduct. All personnel who have contact with children will undergo an additional child protection briefing and regular refresher training.

All media or others visiting Playground Ideas facilitated programs in the field will be expected to undergo a child protection briefing prior to their visit.

Playground Ideas maintains a register of all persons who have been trained.

Marketing & Communications

Playground Ideas makes every effort to ensure the way we represent children in our marketing materials and media is done in a way that keeps them safe and upholds their rights and personal dignity

Using children's images and personal information can help us to share their stories. However, we understand that this needs to be done with care so as not to place children at risk of harm. Accordingly, we have developed a set of guidelines to help to ensure that our research, marketing and communications activities do not place children at risk. See Annex C.

ANNEX C: MARKETING AND COMMUNICATIONS CHILD PROTECTION GUIDELINES

The following guidelines should be followed by Playground Ideas personnel and associates when interacting with children for the purpose of gathering and using research, marketing and communications material to promote the work of Playground Ideas.

- A risk assessment of any activity that involves the use of children's images should be undertaken and preventative measures should be put in place accordingly. • Informed consent is required for all imagery and personal information of a child that is taken and used by Playground Ideas (see informed consent guidelines over-page)
- Do not use images or information (file labels, metadata, text) in such a way as to reveal identifying information about the child when sending images/information electronically or publishing images/information in any form.
- Personal or physical information that could be used to identify the location of a child/children within a country should not be used on a website or in any other form of communication about a child. Do not use community names or locality maps of specific communities. Do not use a child's surname or school name. Only use a child's first name.

For example:

1. Fatima (real name) from (district or state name rather than village name) participating in a Playground Ideas community consultation
  2. Child from (district or state name rather than village name) participating in a Playground Ideas program
  3. Rajini (with disclaimer stating name has been changed for privacy or CP reasons) from (district or state name rather than village name) participating in Playground Ideas program
- Always change a child's name in situations where there may be a risk of compromising the child's safety.
  - If someone does not want their name used this must be respected. • Consider and document child protection risks when developing or adding content to any website or including content in public marketing or communications materials
  - Special consideration to the heightened risks of especially vulnerable children should be given and appropriate mitigation measures put in place to avoid placing such children at increased risk.
  - Show children with their support networks – parents/teachers/class etc.to avoid increasing their vulnerability.
  - Geo tagging functions on cameras and mobile phones should be turned off when taking photographs or video footage.

- Local cultural traditions should be assessed regarding restrictions for reproducing personal images. Prior to taking photographs, assess the local cultural/social traditions regarding taking photographs/ interviewing children. These could include presenting people engaging in particular activities or grouped in certain ways. Take the time to consult with children, community members or adult program participants. Ask them whether there are boundaries you should avoid.
- Ensure all images and communications present children in a dignified and respectful manner and not in a vulnerable or submissive manner. Children should be adequately clothed and not in sexually-suggestive poses.

Informed Consent

Informed consent is required for all imagery and personal information of a child that is taken and used by Playground Ideas. This includes providing an explanation of how the photograph or film will be used.

Informed consent means that the child and their parent/legal guardian understand and acknowledge what they are giving consent for.

In ALL circumstances a child's parent or legal guardian must give their informed consent.

Whilst it is good practice to get informed consent from a child, in some circumstances (for example, where a child is very young) this may not be possible.

Informed consent should be documented via the Playground Ideas informed consent form or via video footage of the informed consent process.

Consent forms can be distributed to school / community leaders to facilitate getting consent, and specific times assigned for taking photos when those interested attend.

All consent forms must be presented or explained in the local language spoken by the subject.

If it is not possible to gain written consent, obtain verbal consent by filming someone explaining in the local language what the image or video will be used for, the persons answer and the date and names of those involved.

As part of obtaining informed consent you must:

- Explain the reasons for taking photographs, film or information and where the content will be used.
- To help people parents/legal guardians understand the risks of their child's image being published on the Internet, explain that the image/words of their child may be on the internet and that they will be able to be seen /read by anyone in the world at anytime.

- Ask if they have any concerns about the use of images or information
- Explain they can withdraw their consent to Playground Ideas to collect or use their information at any time by contacting one of the project staff, or emailing info@playgroundideas.org and that this will not have any negative impact on them or their participation in the program.

Even if a child and their parent have previously given consent, if they do not want to have their photograph taken or used this must be respected at all times.

If a subject seems confused or uncomfortable, do not take the photograph or shoot the footage until this has been resolved. It is very important to allow discussion and question time so that potential subjects are making a real informed decision and do not feel pressure to say 'Yes'.

Ensure that informed consent forms/ videos are filed securely.

Filming and interviewing Guidelines

When making a video, film or collecting information from a child all of the above mentioned general guidelines apply. In addition to these, there are some extra guidelines to follow.

- Check with field staff, parents/legal guardians if there is anything that should not be raised or discussed. Be sure to avoid any topic that would be known to cause distress or embarrassment.
- Inform children and their parents/ legal guardians of:
  - a. The purpose of the film/ consultation/research and where it will be shown/ how it will be used,
  - b. What to expect during filming/consultation or interview, who will be involved/present, what will the child be required/asked to do etc.
  - c. What types of questions/topics will be covered/discussed in interviews/during filming,
  - d. What they can do if they do not feel comfortable answering any questions

Explain that, if they so wish, the child has the right to refuse to comment or have their story told on their behalf and/or have their picture taken without any negative impact/outcome;

- Explain to the child (and parent/legal guardian) that they can stop participating or ask for a break at any time. (Make sure you plan for and schedule in breaks as appropriate to the age of the child/children);
- If the child is reluctant to answer or is becoming distressed, don't push them, just move on to another question;
- Make time to get to know the child and their family, build rapport and put everyone at ease before filming begins. It may be necessary to do this each time you start filming if you are filming over a number of days;
- Never be alone with a child when filming/ consulting or interviewing; • Make sure the filming/ consultation, interview takes place in a child friendly environment/ environment where the child feels safe and comfortable; • Entering someone's house or dwelling without seeking permission is not acceptable;
- Be mindful that a child is likely to be excited (or afraid) at the sight of video cameras (depending on their age and experience);
- Children should never be removed from their communities for the purpose of interviewing, filming or photography;
- When interviewing children, the interviewer should sit or stand at the same height as the child and not 'talk down', either literally or metaphorically; • Adopt a calm, friendly and neutral voice;
- The need to get information or footage should never be prioritized over a child's welfare or safety.
